Better Built Awards Honors FCAI Members

The Better Built network of contractors and construction professionals held its annual dinner on June 23 to recognize individuals who have positively impacted the construction industry. Since there was no dinner in 2021, this year the network honored winners for both 2021 and 2022. Awards included: Safety Awards, Craftsmanship Awards, Excellence in Labor Management, Building a Better Community Award, and the coveted Construction Person of the Year Award. For 2021, the Construction

Person of the Year award went to Bobby Taylor of Mid-Illinois Companies. Bobby has a long list of accomplishments both professionally and within the community.

Executive Director of the West Central Illinois Building and Trades Council Clint Drury said that Bobby is "a great ambassador of the construction industry." Bobby also has taken an active role in philanthropic organizations and believes that "the most precious gift we must give is what we have so little of, time."

Also honored at the dinner were 2022 Safety Award winner Doug Brock from Mid-Illinois Companies as well as 2022 Craftsmanship Award winners Brock Eckhart (Mid-Illinois), Tim Zell (Mid-Illinois), and Chano Rodriguez (Vogue Painting). Congratulations to all the winners!

OSHA's Cold Stress Guidelines

Cold stress occurs by driving down the skin temperature and eventually the internal body temperature (core temperature). This may lead to serious health problems, and may cause tissue damage, and possibly death. Although OSHA does not have a specific standard that covers working in cold environments, employers have a responsibility to provide workers with employment and a place of employment which are free from recognized hazards, including cold stress, which are causing or are likely to cause death or serious physical harm. Employers should, therefore, train workers on the hazards of the job and safety measures to use, such as engineering controls and safe work practices, that will protect workers' safety and health.

Engineering controls (examples) - use radiant heaters to warm workers in outdoor security stations, shield work areas from drafts or wind to reduce wind chill.

Safe work practices (examples) - provide plenty of warm sweetened liquids to workers, schedule heavy work during the warmer part of the day, assign workers to tasks in pairs (buddy system), allow work to be interrupt if workers are extremely uncomfortable, give workers frequent breaks in warm areas, acclimatize workers by gradually increasing their workload, and allowing more frequent breaks in warm areas, so that they can build up a tolerance for working in the cold environment.

Safety measures, such as these, should be incorporated into the relevant health and safety plan for the workplace.
